“ Greg and I met my first year of teaching in Lebanon. He was a student in one of my classes. He always wore a big smile and had a good word for everyone. His sister and I were neighbors and became good friends. She took me roller skating a couple of times and Greg was there watching. He felt sorry for me because I spent most of my time dusting the floor in one form or another. The next time I went roller skating, Greg insisted that I wear his football knee pads. Although I never learned to be a skater, the knee pads did soften the falls. Just one small example of Greg's compassionate heart. He will be missed.
