“ I stopped by your house today like I use to. I loved popping in on you. I would show up in my ugly comfy clothes, and sit next to you, or even crawl in bed with you and just talk. This time was different. I knocked, and Niobe answered, and instead of just walking in like I use to, I stood there frozen. You were my go to for Eva and Bill, and I was your go to. We both struggled with feeling inadequate and not good enough for our loved ones. And our strong-willed girls gave us a run for dear life at times. I loved being in your presence and your peace. I loved making you laugh, which I seemed to do without even trying. God, your laugh is the best. I was always jealous of your beautiful hair and how the sun shined on it making it look like gold. We were supposed to run away together, have a girls trip and forget all responsibilities just for a little bit. You messaged me in the hospital asking to pray for me! Girl, I was the one praying for you, but that's just like you. You always are thinking of others and doing for others even through your own struggles. I love you so much. I kept my promise and made sure all your facial hairs were plucked! Girl, how am I supposed to handle Eva and Ralee without you? Help me to guide our girls in the right direction. I love you beautiful and miss you till my last breath.

“ Sweet Tonia and family,
You were always a joy to work with. Whether it was the constant encouragement you gave, the laughs we shared, or the help you were always willing to give; you were an amazing one of a kind person.
Rest easy, beautiful. ❤️

“ To my neighbor and friend who had a heart big enough to welcome exchange students into her home and was gracious enough to share her daughters with me. Lots of memories! The only way to get through each day is to picture her in heaven praising Jesus with NO MORE PAIN.
